Investment Aim/Objective

The Fund aims to achieve capital growth in excess of the Consumer Prices Index plus 2% per annum over 5-year rolling periods.

The Fund invests in a range of collective investment schemes ("funds") that are exposed to a range of asset classes on a global basis. The Investment Manager's bias is towards actively managed funds although the Fund may also invest in passively managed funds (e.g. index tracking funds). The funds may include those managed or operated by the ACD and its associates.

At least 20% of the Fund will usually be exposed to shares. Typically, between 40% and 80% of the Fund may be exposed to fixed income securities, such as corporate and government bonds, and cash.

Exposure will be gained by investing in funds that either specialise in a particular geographic sector (e.g. for equity funds - UK, US, Europe, Asia Pacific, Japan, Global), asset class (e.g. bonds) or investment theme (e.g. investing in absolute return strategies, or in companies specialising in the energy or technology sectors). The Fund may obtain indirect exposure via the underlying funds to alternative asset classes such as property and companies that specialise in commodities.

The Investment Manager will vary the weighting of the asset classes and global exposures to which the Fund is exposed, taking account of market conditions.

The Fund is managed to sit within the Investment Association's Mixed Investment 20-60% Shares Sector. This means that the Fund's assets will reflect any requirements from time to time of the sector. As the Fund has indirect exposure to the assets held within the funds in which it invests, it will comply with these requirements on a "look through" basis.

Fund Manager Commentary

The final quarter of 2023 started out with a negative bias as spiking long-term interest rates continued to weigh on risk assets. As October progressed, sentiment began to shift thanks to positive economic data in the US coupled with better-than-expected corporate earnings. Investors lived under the shadow of a well-publicised "imminent recession" from late 2022. Factors early in 2023 such as the banking failures extended the flood of liquidity in the system keeping the good times going against all the odds. The feared slowdown has yet to materialise as consumers continue to spend (borrowing has now replaced savings with credit card debt at all-time highs) and the jobs market remains buoyant. The recessionary fears have yet to go away however the inflationary fears and peak interest rates are quickly disappearing in the rear-view mirror.

Throughout the second half of 2023 Inflationary pressures have receded much faster than bond and equity markets had priced for. In view of the new inputs the pathway for interest rates in 2024 has quickly readjusted to reflect the potential for a "soft landing" in the economy – one where growth remains strong, inflation falls, and the Federal Reserve can reduce interest rates on the grounds of falling inflation rather than slowing growth due to recessionary pressures. With these new parameters priced into the 2024 equation government bond markets sharply reversed course from their 2023 highs to dip very quickly back to levels that we saw at the start of the year. In addition, equity markets took the signal to rally, a rally that broadened out beyond the "magnificent seven". Small and Midcap equities in the US rallied as those who were underweight equity exposure sought to increase exposure in sectors of the market where valuations looked attractive relative to large cap growth.

The strong year end rally in both Bonds and equities was a very welcome boost to our portfolios. With interest rates spiking in Q2 and Q3 of 2023 we extended duration in the Funds boosting our holdings in Funds such as the Vanguard UK Long duration Gilt and the M&G Global Macro Bond Fund. The sharp rebound in these fund as interest rates have fallen have been similar to equity like returns and benefits the overall risk profile of the portfolios. Our equity exposures have also had a very good end to the year; those holdings outside of the "mega cap growth stocks" benefitting from their "unloved" status to find their way back into "Buy lists".

As we go into 2024 investors are weighing up the strength of the US and global economies and the threats of geo-political factors on it. So far, we have avoided recession and the fears of a spiking oil price, due to instability in the Middle East, re-igniting inflation fears. The Federal Reserve has pivoted from hawkish to almost dovish signalling to the market that risk assets are back. Whilst valuations in the US still look expensive based on current earnings expectations, the P/E multiple could look very different if earnings start to come through better than expected, underpinning current valuations, and allowing some room for higher prices.

Within our portfolios I intend to keep our current weightings. The defensive tilt particularly within fixed interest should continue to serve as strongly in a lower inflationary environment. Should growth slow down and equity markets take a leg lower I will take the opportunity to add to our equity positions in areas of the markets where valuations are not stretched.
